Amede Olisa-Achingale

CEO

Bosaz Foods

Nigeria

Amede Olisa-Achingale is a passionate Ex-banker, turned award winning social entrepreneur passionate about women's empowerment, agribusiness, and rural development in Africa. With extensive experience in building women-centered programs, she has led initiatives that strengthen smallholder farmers' capacities in entrepreneurship, value addition, cluster formation, financial literacy, and market access. Amede is committed to creating scalable and sustainable solutions that improve livelihoods while fostering dignity and resilience among women and youth.

Bosaz Foods

Is a women-led and purpose driven agribusiness social enterprise dedicated to reducing post-harvest losses and improving food security in Africa. Through innovative, community-centered models such as solar-powered modular agro-processing and preservation hubs, the organization provides smallholders—especially women farmers and cooperatives—with affordable access to processing, preservation, storage, and market linkages. Beyond technology, the enterprise builds local capacity in agri-entrepreneurship, digital and financial literacy, and cooperative development, enabling women and youth to increase incomes, access markets, and break cycles of poverty.
